HISTORICAL NOTE:

Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing was created upon the merger of Presbyterian Hospital and St. Luke's Hospital in 1956. The school closed in 1968 after graduating its ninth class. Edith D. Payne served as director of the school from its inception to its closing. Previously, she had been director of the St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing from 1953 until its merger with Presbyterian's school in 1956. Under her leadership, the Presbyterian-St. Luke's program offered an innovative educational training course consisting of two years of class work followed by a one-year internship in the hospital. The main reason for the decline and eventual closing of the school was the trend in nursing education toward schools with university affiliations which offered a bachelor's in nursing, something Presbyterian-St. Luke's could not do. One sign of problems was in 1962 when a large number of student applications for admission were withdrawn, with many students citing the cost of the program and the lack of college affiliation as their reasons. Over the next few years the trend was not reversed and the school had a difficult time recruiting enough qualified students. The decision to close the school was made early in 1967, and it officially disbanded in 1968. A total of 1,141 students graduated from Presbyterian-St. Luke's School of Nursing.

On January 4, 1965, a professional department for nursing was organized at Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital with a chairman appointed to develop this department encompassing the responsibilities of patient care, education and research. Prior to that date, there were two departments concerned with nursing—the Department of Nursing Service and the School of Nursing. As part of this reorganization, central service and some hospital administrative functions were moved from nursing to the Department of Medical Administration. Material related to the Department of Nursing or Division of Nursing is noted throughout this finding aid. Other Division of Nursing records are included in a separate collection for Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital Department of Nursing/Division of Nursing.

Series 2. Annual Reports, 1956-1969

18 items
Arrangement: Chronological
Scope Content: Annual Reports includes the annual reports of the School of Nursing and the Department of Nursing for the hospital, later the Division of Nursing. Some annual reports for the school also include more specific departmental reports for Medical-Surgical Nursing, Natural Science, Obstetric Nursing, Pediatric Nursing, Psychiatric Nursing, Student Affairs, Social Science, and the Communication Section. The annual reports describe the increasing lack of qualified applicants to the school and the decrease in nursing students’ interest in diploma education in nursing as opposed to earning a college degree. On January 4, 1965, a professional department for nursing was organized at Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital with a chairman appointed to develop this department encompassing the responsibilities of patient care, education and research. Prior to that date, there were two departments concerned with nursing—the Department of Nursing Service and the School of Nursing. As part of this reorganization, central service and some hospital administrative functions were moved from nursing to the Department of Medical Administration. The Department of Nursing/Division of Nursing reports focus on nursing practice at Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital, particularly nursing care and nursing personnel. These reports include information about continuing education for nursing staff and projects such as the opening of the Neighborhood Health Center in February 1967 with its relationship to the Mile Square Area. The reports also describe changes in staff positions and curriculum and also include statistics for admissions and enrollment and state board licensing examinations. The last annual report included in this collection is for the Division of Nursing, 1968-1969, after the closure of the School of Nursing. Other Division of Nursing records are included in a separate collection for Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital Department of Nursing/Division of Nursing. These reports are not bound and some departmental reports are handwritten.
