Abstract:

Presbyterian Hospital of the City of Chicago, 1883-1957, was founded by faculty at Rush Medical College who wanted a hospital which could provide clinical instruction for its students. Rush Medical College was affiliated with the University of Chicago beginning in 1898. In 1942, Rush Medical College was closed after the loss of the affiliation. Soon afterward, Presbyterian Hospital became affiliated with the University of Illinois. In an effort to combine their resources, Presbyterian Hospital merged with St. Luke’s Hospital, 25 April 1956, becoming Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital. The records of Presbyterian Hospital of the City of Chicago, 1882-1980s, include organizational histories, administrative material, financial material, printed material, clippings, and artifacts. Administrative material includes annual reports for the hospital, the Woman’s Board, and various departments, founding documents, and other material. Departments and subjects represented in the collection include the Medical Staff and the Woman’s Board, formerly the Ladies’ Aid Society. Also included are several documents from the 1950s related to the merger of Presbyterian Hospital and St. Luke’s Hospital. Documents in this series also relate to Presbyterian Hospital’s affiliation with the University of Chicago, 1930s, and, later, the University of Illinois, 1940s. Presbyterian Hospital’s symbiotic relationship with Rush Medical College, even after it closed in 1941, is evident throughout the series. Financial material includes a ledger, 1884-1896, and monthly financial statements, 1910-1915, 1920-1924, and 1940-1953. Printed material includes newsletters, pamphlets, programs, booklets, guides, and clippings and articles featuring Presbyterian Hospital.

HISTORICAL NOTE:

Presbyterian Hospital of the City of Chicago, 1883-1957, was chartered July 21, 1883, by faculty at Rush Medical College as a facility to provide clinical instruction for medical students. The faculty cooperated with local Presbyterian leaders to procure the financial support necessary to proceed with construction. The hospital was built adjacent to Rush Medical College at the corner of South Wood Street and Congress Parkway. The Woman’s Board, formerly the Ladies’ Aid Society, developed during the beginning stages of the hospital and played a key role in fundraising for and service to the hospital throughout its history. The hospital’s relationship with Rush Medical College led to an increasing interest in medical research at the hospital. In 1903, the hospital introduced the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses. Rush Medical College was affiliated with the University of Chicago beginning in 1898. Because of its symbiotic relationship with Rush, Presbyterian Hospital had a strong influence on Rush’s relationship with the University of Chicago. Eventually, Presbyterian, Rush, and the University of Chicago disagreed on the future of Rush, and the affiliation dissolved. In 1942, Rush Medical College closed. Soon afterward, Presbyterian Hospital became affiliated with the University of Illinois. The medical staff of Presbyterian Hospital served as faculty for the University of Illinois. In an effort to combine their resources, Presbyterian Hospital merged with St. Luke’s Hospital, on April 25, 1956 and became Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Hospital.

COLLECTION OVERVIEW:

The records of Presbyterian Hospital of the City of Chicago, 1882-1980s, include organizational histories, administrative material, financial material, printed material, clippings, and artifacts. Administrative material includes annual reports for the hospital, the Woman’s Board, and various departments; founding documents; and other documents related to Presbyterian Hospital and some of its departments or organizations. Departments and subjects represented in the collection include the Board of Managers, hospital libraries, interns and residents, the Medical Staff, and the Woman’s Board, most of which are represented by only a few items. Also included are several documents from the 1950s related to the merger of Presbyterian Hospital and St. Luke’s Hospital which was finalized in 1959. Documents in this series also relate to Presbyterian Hospital’s affiliation with the University of Chicago, 1930s, and, later, the University of Illinois, 1940s. Presbyterian Hospital’s symbiotic relationship with Rush Medical College, even after it closed in 1941, is evident throughout the series. Financial material includes a ledger, 1884-1896, and monthly financial statements, 1910-1915, 1920-1924, and 1940-1953. Printed material includes newsletters, pamphlets, programs, booklets, guides, and clippings and articles featuring Presbyterian Hospital. Artifacts include two bibles presumably owned by Presbyterian Hospital.

Historical Information, 1890s-1980s and undated
Various Histories, undated

Series 2. Administrative Material, 1882-1956, 1980s

About 400 items
Scope Content: Administrative material includes annual reports for the hospital, the Woman’s Board, and various departments; founding documents; and other documents related to Presbyterian Hospital and some of its departments or organizations. Annual reports are listed first, followed by material related more generally to Presbyterian Hospital listed chronologically. Chronological material is followed by material listed alphabetically by department or subject. Annual reports often include the annual reports of the Ladies’ Aid Society, later the Womans’ Board; the School for Nurses; and by-laws and charter information. By 1937, the Woman’s Board had its own separate annual report. Departments and subjects represented in the collection include the Board of Managers, hospital libraries, interns and residents, the Medical Staff, and the Woman’s Board, most of which are represented by only a few items. Also included are several documents from the 1950s related to the merger of Presbyterian Hospital and St. Luke’s Hospital which was finalized in 1959. The Medical Staff is represented by the largest number of items and includes meeting minutes from the 1920s to the time of the merger. Medical Staff minutes include information about various committees and departments, such as the X-ray Department, the Committee for the Control of Radium, the Pharmacy Committee, the Nurses Committee, and the Contagious Diseases Committee among many others. These minutes also include obituaries of staff members, correspondence, memoranda, and recommendations for staff. Also included are proceedings for Attending Staff, 1884-1942, which include minutes, rules and regulations, appointments, staff histories, and correspondence. Documents in this series also relate to Presbyterian Hospital’s affiliation with the University of Chicago, 1930s, and, later, the University of Illinois, 1940s. Also included are rules, regulations, and policies for the Obstetrical Department, house officers, interns and residents, and other personnel, 1930s-1950s. Presbyterian Hospital’s symbiotic relationship with Rush Medical College, even after it closed in 1941, is evident throughout the series. A laboratory ledger, 1938-1942, includes items used by various departments, their costs, and the companies who sold the items.

About 230 items
Scope Content: Printed material includes newsletters, pamphlets, programs, booklets, guides, and clippings and articles featuring Presbyterian Hospital. The Bulletin, 1909-1956, was published by the Woman’s Board, formerly the Ladies’ Aid Society, and was printed usually three or four times a year until 1936 when it became a monthly publication. In 1949, the newsletter became more formal and less personal, focusing on articles about medical subjects. The Bulletin includes issue summaries for issues from 1909-1956. News Briefs, 1955-1956, a newsletter for and by the employees and staff of Presbyterian Hospital, provides another perspective on the hospital. Some pamphlets include histories of Presbyterian Hospital. Other printed material includes a patient guide, 1948, and a prayer book for patients, 1950.
