Abstract:

Urologist and professor, James W. Merricks, 1908-1999, was born in West Virginia in 1908. He graduated from West Virginia University, earning a B.A. in 1930, and a B.S. the following year. He then moved to Chicago, Ill., to attend Rush Medical College, from which he graduated in 1934. In 1936, he joined the staff of Presbyterian Hospital and the faculty of urology at Rush Medical College. After Rush Medical College closed its doors to new students in 1942, Merricks continued teaching at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He became founder and chief officer of Merri-Med Cine Productions, which produced more than a dozen urologic and surgical films which Merricks termed medical cinema. In 1956, with R. Kennedy Gilchrist, he developed a substitute bladder and urethra. This topic became the subject of one of many medical films produced by Merricks. In 1970, the newly-formed Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Medical Center appointed him to the urology faculty, of which he served as an emeritus member from 1971 until his death in 1999. Merricks served as head of the Section of Urology at Highland Park Hospital, 1970-1982, in Highland Park, Ill., the town in which Merricks had made his residence. Merricks was also a prolific amateur photography. Merricks was married to Virginia White Merricks. Merricks died 31 July 1999.

Urologist and professor James W. Merricks’s papers consist of biographical information, correspondence, writings by Merricks and others, school material, professional material, awards and certificates, film production material, patient material, pictures, audiovisual material, and artifacts. Biographical information includes Merricks’s curriculum vitae, bibliographies, obituaries, and clippings. Correspondence includes letters to and from Merrick mostly concerning medical matters. Writings by Merricks and others include articles, papers, and presentations mostly concerning urology. School material includes mostly papers and notes written by Merrick while he was a student at West Virginia University. Professional material includes items related to professional and medical organizations and conferences with which Merricks was involved. Awards and certificates include awards, certificates, and licenses awarded to Merricks, mostly related to his medical career. Film production material includes material mostly related to medical films made and produced by Merricks or his film production company Merri-Med Cine Productions. This material includes narrative scripts, illustrations, and correspondence related to the films, as well as reviews on other medical films by Merricks. Patient material includes research notes, case summaries, correspondence, and a day book that relate to Merricks’s and other doctors’ patients. This material identifies patients, and is therefore restricted until further notice. Pictures include photographs, negatives, and slides related to Merrick. Pictures and 35mm slides include pictures of Merrick and his wife, family, and friends; Presbyterian Hospital and Highland Park; medical pictures; professional meetings; artistic photographs taken by Merricks. Glass lantern slides are all medical in nature, from patient cases and medical research. Audiovisual material includes home movies and medical films in 16mm film and VHS videocassette formats. Artifacts include photography equipment and medals.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE:

Urologist and professor, James W. Merricks, 1908-1999, was born in West Virginia in 1908. He graduated from West Virginia University, earning a B.A. in 1930, and a B.S. the following year. He then moved to Chicago, Ill., to attend Rush Medical College, from which he graduated in 1934. After interning at Detroit’s Harper Hospital, he earned a urology residency with Robert H. Herbst at Presbyterian Hospital. From 1935 to 1937, Merricks continued studying urology as a fellow at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn. In 1936, he returned to Chicago to join the staff of Presbyterian Hospital and the faculty of urology at Rush Medical College. After Rush Medical College closed its doors to new students in 1942, Merricks continued teaching at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Merricks also practiced medicine at his Michigan Avenue office, which he shared with Frank B. Papierniak. Merricks’ research and publications emphasized aspects of his urology specialization. With R. Kennedy Gilchrist, he developed a substitute bladder and urethra, 1956. This topic became the subject of one of many medical films produced by Merricks. He became founder and chief officer of Merri-Med Cine Productions, which produced more than a dozen urologic and surgical films which Merricks termed medical cinema. Most of these films were distributed through the American College of Surgeons Film Library. “Gilchrist-Merricks Substitute Bladder” received the Gold Medal of recognition at the International Medical Film Exhibit held by the 1958 Brussels World’s Fair. Merricks served as Secretary-Treasurer or President of the Rush Medical College Alumni Association throughout the 1960s. In 1970, the newly-formed Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Medical Center appointed him to the urology faculty, of which he served as an emeritus member from 1971 until his death in 1999. Merricks served as head of the Section of Urology at Highland Park Hospital, 1970-1982, in Highland Park, Ill., the town in which Merricks had made his residence. Merricks was also a prolific amateur photography. Merricks died 31 July 1999 in Highland Park, Ill.

Merricks’s wife, Virginia White Merricks, nee Virginia A. White, graduated from the St. Luke’s Hospital School of Nursing in 1930. Since 1945, she was a life member of the former Presbyterian Hospital Women’s Board, serving on the standing committee of its Gift Shop in the late 1940s and early 1950s. She went on to become a sustaining member of the Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke’s Medical Center Woman’s Board. She died in May 1998.
